Heparin-binding growth factors have been reported to stimulate DNA synthesis and mitogenesis of normal cells in the presence of serum. We have identified heparin-binding growth factors in the conditioned media of human melanoma cell lines that had been selected to grow as highly or poorly metastatic variants in experimental animals. Heparin binding factors were found only in the supernatants of the highly metastatic cell lines and concentrated by heparin affinity chromatography. Analytical isoelectric focusing revealed three isoelectric forms of the growth factor present in highly metastatic cell lines. Two major peaks of activity occurred at isoelectric points of pH 4.6 and 5.1 and a minor peak at 6.2. Molecular masses of the growth factors, measured by gel permeation chromatography, ranged from 8000 to 21,000 daltons. The presence of these factors in the supernatants of highly metastatic melanoma cell lines could explain the ability of heparin-binding growth factors to stimulate mitogenesis in serum-free medium.
